HITS PROMISES IN FINAL TALK

Hunter, Winding Up Campaign, Asserts 'My Platform Is My Reputation.'

Closing his campaign as he opened it less than two weeks ago, Claude M. Hunter, Democratic candidate for mayor, last night offered "an administration of honesty, efficiency, economy and progress, if elected to the mayor's office next Tuesday."

In a talk at a city-wide rally at the courthouse, the final Democratic meeting of the campaign, Hunter said: "I have been called the candidate without a platform. Some people seem to think that it is necessary to make a lot of promises that look well on paper, and that may be all right. But my platform has been repeated to you several times—it is my reputation, my rating in the community and the men I have running with me on the ticket."

As a citizen and property holder in Mansfield, Hunter said "I am interested in the improvement of streets, in traffic problems as they pertain to safety, in the parks and the proper kind of recreation, in the churches and fraternal organizations and any movement that is for the betterment of the city. G. O. P. DRIVE FOR VOTES OVER

Campaigners Concentrate on House-to-House Calls to Get Out Voters.

With the municipal election only about 60 hours away, activities at Republican headquarters today were practically at a standstill, ending one of the quietest campaigns carried on in the history of the city of Mansfield.

The Republican party wound up their campaign at a county-wide rally held at the First M. E. church Thursday night when they were addressed by Congressman Dudley White of Norwalk.

From now until Tuesday, Republican workers and candidates plan to concentrate on house-to-house calls, distribution of campaign literature and an effort to get all Republican voters to go to the polls Tuesday.

The strategy of the camp of Glenn L. Bierly, the Republican candidate for mayor has called for quiet organization work in the city's six wards. He has advocated a return to the old political forum and stressed a quiet campaign for other candidates on the Republican ticket.

City Workers Ready To Fight Against 'Political Dismissals'

Declaring that "we should not be forced into politics in order to hold our jobs," city employes not under civil service sounded a warning today that they would fight against dismissals for "political reasons."

Earl Hoover, treasurer of the Mansfield local, No. 128, of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, declared that the union also would seek a stricter policy toward the extension of civil service.

Hoover's statement followed a conference at Trades Council hall last night which was attended by three officers of the city employes' union and B. M. Ferguson, president of Mansfield Trades council.

Hoover, spokesman for the group, denied that the announcement, coming only three days before election, had any political significance.

"Regardless of who the next mayor may be, we intend to push our drive for extension of civil service and will send a representative to the council meeting Tuesday night to ask for an answer to our petition for that extension," Hoover said. The petition was submitted to council in July.

"We have the backing of organized labor in Mansfield and will exert that influence to protect our jobs in the event that a city employe is dismissed for any reason other than incompetency or misconduct," he added.

The employes' union, has a membership of about 70.

FINDS BRIDE OF MONTH IS HIS SISTER

Young Missouri Farmer and Mate Separate as They Learn Strange News.

ORPHANED AS BABIES

Neither Had Known of Other Until Foster Parents Dug Into Records.

MOUNTAIN GROVE, Mo.—(U.P.)—Ben Ipock was too confused and downhearted today to do his farm work because, in finding a sister of whom he never knew, he had lost a bride. They were one and the same person. He had been marreid to her a month.

The marriage was annulled immediately and they separated, each going back to the home of foster parents who raised them from childhood, to readjust their emotions. He doesn't want to see her again until he has grown accustomed to the idea that his love for her is a brotherly affection and not that of a man for his mate.

Bride Stunned.

Mary Lee was stunned. She hadn't even known that she was an adopted child.

The story dates back 20 years.

The first coincidence was when Grant Ipock, a Wright county farmer, and his wife both died within a year, leaving two infant children, Ben and Mary Lee.

The children went to the orphanage at Jefferson City When Mary Lee was 2 years old, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Williams adopted her. They took her to their home near Chilhowee. At about the same time, Mr. and Mrs. Sod Yocum took Ben away to their home in Mountain Grove. He was 4. Both children were too young at the time to realize that the other existed.

Ben grew up to be a good worker about the farm and he decided six months ago to go out on his own. He went as far north as Chilhowee and took a job on the Williams farm. He fell in love with the Williams' daughter, Mary Lee.

The Williams family approved. After harvest, he wanted to go back and visit the Yocums, and the Williamses let Mary Lee go along with him.

It was Mrs. Williams who first

AUTO KILLS CONDUCTOR

LONDON—(AP)—Forrest E. (Dick) Willard, Cincinnati and Lake Erie traction line conductor for 15 years, was killed in an automobile near here last night.

HALLOWE-E-N!

This is the night when owls will hoot
Giving forth strange unnatural cries
And hosts of goblins quickly scoot
In lumpy shapes and queer disguise
Wide grinning skulls will peer from trees
While skeletons in graveyards dance
And squeaking bats will fan the breeze
Above the yawning graves, perchance.
Black magic is abroad tonight
And you may see the fearful hag
Silhouetted against the bright
Face of the moon, astride her nag.

City 'Rocks' As Halloween Celebrants Parade, Frolic

1,000 In Costumes March—Snake Dances and More Parading Follow as Festivities Last Well Into Night.

Halloween officially is tomorrow night, but young Mansfield and many of the oldsters, celebrated the occasion thoroughly last evening in festivities that lasted well into the night.

First of all there was a parade in which nearly 1,000 participated, the majority in costume. Then came the snake-dances that used to follow football games, a roller skating party and some spontaneous parading.

All in all, it was a big evening for festivities.

Opens With Parade.

The celebration opened with a four-block parade of costumed marchers, floats, and musical groups that wound its way through the crowded business section.

A group carrying red and green flares, and a boy and a girl, both dressed as Indians, and riding horses, led the procession. Then came the Senior high school band and girls' bugle and drum corps, minus their colorful uniforms, and dressed as "bums," followed by the floats, a "costume group," and the bicycle section. The 35-piece accordion band from Smart's studio was the other musical unit in the line of march.

Some 125 awards were presented to the paraders. Winners of the best decorated bicycles were June Eick, 37 Buckingham avenue, first; Doris Arnold, 200 Lida street, second, and Russell McCartney, Barnes avenues, third.

The most antique float in the parade was a horse and buggy, entered by the Junior Hi-Y club, the horse and buggy was also given the prize for the grand champion float in the parade. The prize for the most unique float went to June Eick, and her cornstalk decorated bicycle.

Prize for the best float went to Smart's Studio of Music, in which a 35-piece accordian band was

MAYOR TO SEEK MEETING WITH DEALERS, UNION

Deliveries Must Be Resumed Monday, McFarland Asserts; Says Blockade Halts Construction Work; Dealers Turn Down Demands of Union.

The city government prepared today to take a hand in Mansfield's coal strike, now in its fourth day.

Mayor Earl A. McFarland said this morning that "deliveries must be opened up by Monday" and that the city would try to arrange a meeting of coal and building supply dealers and union leaders today to effect some settlement to permit resumption of normal traffic in coal and building supply materials.

The mayor said he would attempt to arrange a meeting of the dealers and unionists with himself, Service-Safety Director Philip Wolfe, Chief Meade K. Bates and Sheriff E. P. Long.

"This situation has gone far enough," McFarland added. "The delay in delivery of building materials has halted a number of jobs. In some instances, construction work is threatened to be held up all winter unless contractors can get materials needed now. The same situation is true as it applies to coal.

"Just what plan we will follow to get deliveries out of coal and building supply yards remains to be decided. We will take up that phase after our meeting today. Before we take any action, we will want to know if the blockade is to be continued."

The mayor referred to the blockade set up by International Union of Chauffeurs, Teamsters, Stablemen and Helpers, of which Joseph Huntsman is business agent for Local No. 40, and which has halted all deliveries of building supplies and confined coal deliveries to amounts of a ton or less to residences and business places where fuel supplies are exhausted.

Meanwhile, there were developments on a number of fronts, but none that would indicate that settlement of the difficulty was nearer.

Coal dealers met behind closed doors last night at the offices of the Mansfield Bottling company and conferred for three hours.

Continue Deliveries.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the dealers announced that they would refuse to sign the agreement presented by the union, and had made no concessions. They said they planned to continue under the agreement with the union that deliveries of not more than a ton at a time could be delivered in cases of need.

The dealers said that the chief point of difference was not over wages, but over two other provisions of the contract submitted by Chinese 'Lost Battalion' To Evacuate Warehouse—Fort In Ruins of Chapei.

SHANGHAI—(AP)—British police reported tonight that China's famous "lost battalion" in devastated Chapei was laying down its arms and soon would come into the international settlement for sanctuary.

The reported decision of the battalion to abandon its stand against the surrounding Japanese were said to be the result of the urgings of foreign consuls general, who sought to end a situation considered dangerous to the international areas.

It was feared the settlement would be gravely endangered if the battalion continued to defy its enemies.

The battalion, unit of the famous 88th division, had held out in a warehouse-fortress near the settlement boundary since the general Chinese retreat from Chapei Wednesday.

Earlier tonight the Japanese, who surrounded the fortress on three sides, had begun a steady, methodical artillery bombardment of the beleaguered stronghold.

With four 75-millimeter guns mounted 100 yards away, Japanese artillery slowly fired shells in an attempt to batter a hole in the rear of the warehouse through which a hand-to-hand charge would be possible.

URBANA—(U.P.)—Phyllis Coleman, threemonth-old "incubator baby" born in a Springfield hospital, was with her mother, Mrs. James W. Coleman, on a farm near Kennard today.

The infant, weighing only three pounds at birth on July 27, weighed six pounds and was strong enough to leave the hospital last Wednesday. But her parents, who had moved from Springfield, could not be found immediately and it was at first feared the baby had been deserted.

However, when Mr. and Mrs. Coleman read about the supposed desertion, they hurried to the hospital and claimed their baby.

Hold Your Hats, Football Heads Into Home Stretch

Hold your hats, boys. Football rounds the turn today and heads into the home half of the annual fall frolics with as big and classy an assortment of star attractions as the season has seen to date. And the faithful will respond to the tune of half a million fans.

Dartmouth and Yale, both undefeated, set the pace for the East. Notre Dame and Minnesota, the powers-that-ususally-are, tangle in the leading midwest mauling. Undefeated, untied and very tough California clashes with U.C.L.A. in the Pacific coast headliner.

Baylor battles an anything but an easy Texas Christian team in the southwest. Alabama comes to grips with Kentucky and Vanderbilt meets Georgia Tech in the south's top attractions.

The intersectional bill is headed by the Fordham-North Carolina and Villanova-Detroit clashes. The mid-western invasion of Santa Clara in an attempt to upset Marquette is another highlight.

The clash between the undefeated, untied Western Reserve and Dayton outfits tops a fine Ohio bill.

The high school grid slate in this vicinity is billed at Stadium field where the once-defeated Tygers of Mansfield high school step out of their class to meet the Western Reserve freshmen. Shelby is host to Marion.

In games played yesterday, Galion whipped Rossford, 19 to 9; Mt. Vernon trounced Ashland, 32 to 7, and Bellville trimmed Ashley, 41 to 6.

Standards Set Up for New Homes

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Technical Division of the Federal Housing administration sets up standards of construction for homes which are to be financed under the Insured Mortgage system.

Howard P. Vermilya, director of the division, points out that no particular style of architecture is sponsored by the Housing administration. In inspecting a property that is to be financed by an insured mortgage, beside a well-arranged convenient plan, the attainment of simplicity, good proportion, and balance is of greater importance than the particular style employed.

Over a period of years, changed habits have brought a demand for flexibility in the arrangement of space, he says. Other institutions have taken from a house some of its functions. Nursery schools, playgrounds, theaters, amusement centers, restaurants, and other by-products of modern life tend to diffuse the activities of the family. They are all competitors for a share of the family budget. As a result, a desire for economy calls for less space without the loss of a sense of space. This should be reflected in modern planning.

Change in Style.

For the past 100 years, Vermilya believes, popular acceptance of styles in domestic American architecture has been a transitory thing. Today it is colonial. Yesterday it was English tudor, Norman French, Spanish, Italian, perceded by the gingerbread era and its forerunner, the Greek revival. What will it be tomorrow? This question should be of vital importance to mortgage interests, because of their dependance on marketability.

Changing modes of living and new materials and techniques have led to the growth of a new style—the so-called modern. Such evidence as exists indicates that it is a development of considerable vitality. Vermilya concludes, and one that cannot be dismissed as a temporary fad.

Balance Diet for Reducing

By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty"

Women who are trying to reduce, I have found, often are inclined to restrict their foods to merely one type, and forget all about balance. And carbohydrates, it seems, are one of the first things eliminated from the diet by the over-plump damsel.

Dietitians, however, when planning reducing diets, stress the point of cutting down on sweets and starches, but insist that a certain amount of carbohydrates daily is necessary for the maintenance of health. The point is that if one cuts down too severely on calories, or eliminates all carbohydrates, a great deal of body tissue is burned up in order to furnish energy.

When protein tissues are burned for energy fuel, the result is usually a lowering of vitality and an excess of acid in the system. It is plain to see, therefore, that in order that only fatty tissue be burned during the following of a reducing routine, a certain amount of carbohydrates must be included in any low caloric diet, so that the protein tissues necessary to vibrant health will be unimpaired.

Of course, the quantity of carbohydrate foods must be limited. Those having the highest satiety value are the best to include, especially if they are accompanied by mineral elements, such as are contained in a glass of milk, or milk combined with malt or cocoa.

A reducing luncheon, for instance, made up of a slice of toast, a green salad of lettuce, finely chopped cabbage, or any preferred raw, fresh vegetables, with a dressing of mineral oil and lemon, plus a glass of milk either plain or combined with malt or cocoa, will provide the body with sufficient minerals, and vitamins, proteins, carbohydrates and fats, to keep it healthful.

Lean Meats Good.

Lean meats have a high satiety value, as do also eggs, milk and raw cabbage, celery and like leafy or fibrous plants. By including such foods along with plenty of cooked fresh vegetables and watery fruits, the diet may be rendered quite satisfying, especially after the first week when the system has become accustomed to the new routine.

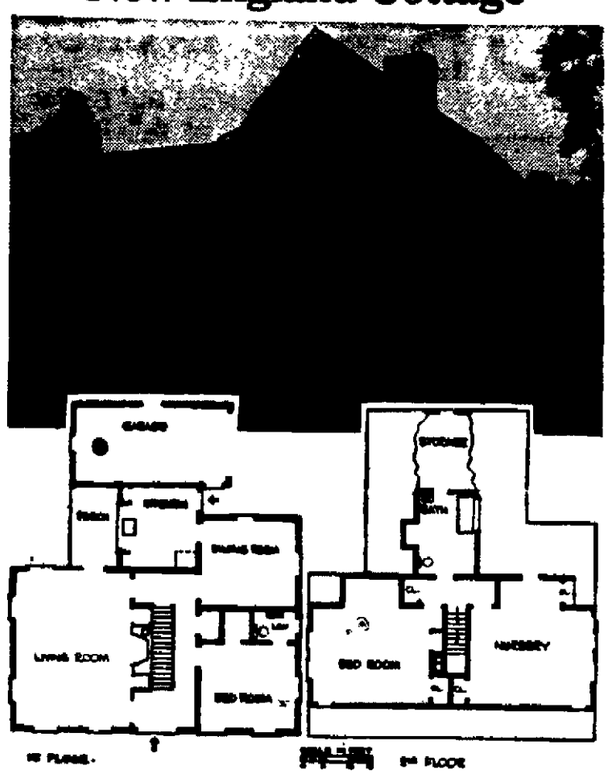

Most folk seem to shy away from milk when they are attempting to reduce. Yet milk is relatively low in fattening power, a whole quart of it only being equal to four slices of white bread. Milk is very rich in carbohydrates, proteins, minerals and vitamins that the system needs, too. Practically all dietitians maintain that every adult, whether on a reducing course or not, should consume at least one pint of this beverage daily, for the protective elements that it contains. And, personally, I agree with them.

Today's Recipes.

HAM AU GRATIN—Two cups chopped, cooked ham; four tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, two cups milk, one egg, one stalk celery, one tablespoon grated onion, one-fourth teaspoon paprika. Melt butter, add flour, and mix well. Add milk, and cook until thickened. Add egg, well beaten, seasonings, and chopped, cooked ham. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until heated through and eat.

New England Cottage

A Colonial cottage has undeniable charm. This one of white clapboard, with cedar-shingled roof and dark green blinds, was built at Morris Plains, N. J.

The service portion of the house is definitely removed from the living quarters. The downstairs layout includes a guest room and lavatory, and a restful little screened porch with a brick floor. The incorporated garage is readily accessible from the kitchen entrance.

A noteworthy touch in the living room is a built-in wood box beside the fireplace.

Master bedroom, nursery and bath compose the upstairs accommodations. Storage space over the garage can be reached through the bathroom.

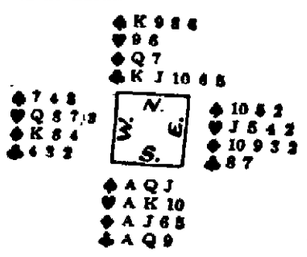

Architect Seth H. Ely, jr., drew this plan, which was chosen by the Architectural Forum, 135 E. 42nd street, New York, N. Y.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

BUILDING A SQUEEZE

In the building of a successful squeeze play, it is frequently necessary to use the maneuver called the "Vienna Coup." This consists of laying down the ranking card of a suit and deliberately setting up the next card of the opponent whom you intend to squeeze. Then, when the pressure is put on, any discard he makes is disastrous. Failure to lay down that high card can change the whole timing of the squeeze and make it possible for him to pick a discard which will do him no harm.

Seven-No Trump was the final contract reached by North-South on this deal. South opened with 2-No Trumps, North called 3-Clubs, South 4-No Trumps, North 5-Spades and South went to 7-No Trumps.

If South's play had been equal to his bidding of the hand, he could have made the contract. He won the first lead of the heart 3, covered by East's J, with the heart K. He then cashed his three high spades, ran his five clubs and then the spade K, but as West discarded after South he was able to guide himself accordingly and consequently set the contract one trick.

With 12 tricks in sight, and from the original lead, placing the heart Q with West, if South figured that West also held the diamond K, he had a good chance for his contract. He should have won the first trick with the heart K, cashed the three spades, then the clubs A and Q and then the diamond A. Now, when he entered dummy with the club 9, to run the remaining clubs and the spade K, it would have been impossible for West to hold the diamond K and a stopper for his heart Q, and any discard would have proved valuable to South.

Monday's Problem.

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable)

After the lead of the spade J, what defense sets South's contract of 1-No Trump?

QUICK REFRIGERATOR DESSERT.—One cup cream, two egg yolks, three-fourths cup crushed and sweetened fresh or canned fruit. Whip cream, beat egg whites and combine. Flavor with crushed fruit. Put in sherbet glasses and chill in refrigerator. Lady fingers or slices of sponge cake may be used to line the glasses.

A marshmallow dropped in a cup of hot cocoa just before serving makes a delicious hot drink.

Fruit juices may be canned or bottled when left over, without sugar, and used as needed by combining with gelatin, or in lemonade.

Teaching Right Use Of Money

By VIRGINIA LEE

One of the most useful things that parents can teach their children is the wise use of money. The man or woman who can handle their funds so as to be neither spendthrift nor tightwad, who "makes the money go far," but gets full value and always "knows where he stands financially," is to be envied.

You cannot teach your youngsters this by giving them everything they ask for, nor by being stingy with them and grudgingly handing out a penny now and then. They must have some moey of their own, and be taught the value of it and its legitimate use.

The other day a friend was telling me of a woman in her late thirties, who earns her own living, but is always in debt. She borrows from everyone with whom she works. More funds merely mean more money to spend. Her husband is sending regular amounts with which she is supposed to pay off a certain debt. Instead, that money goes after the rest.

What can be done with such a person? I'm sure I don't know. She can have had no proper training as a child, and I wonder if she ever will be "reformed." Is a reform possible, and how would it be brought about? If any of you have had experience with such a person and have seen them turn over a new leaf, I wish you would tell me about it. Squandering money in this way is as disrupting a habit as drink, except that it does not demoralize one physically. And it seems just as hard to cure as the drink habit.

WORRIED: Mothers do get these prejudices against their children's young friends because of something the friend did or said, and it is hard to eradicate the bad impression. You do not say what it was that the boy did that made your mother feel so bitter about him. If your mother won't talk to him over the phone, could he write to her and do his best to explain?

In the meantime I wouldn't see the boy secretly, if I were you. It is bad business, this sneaking out. No good ever comes of such a proceeding.

Leftover bacon end pieces, etc, are all precious adjuncts in flavoring other food combinations. A plain bread stuffing is much improved by the addition of chopped bacon. Add cup of bacon to 2 cups of bread crumbs. Lessen the amount of salt called for in the recipe.

Foxgloves and oriental poppies cannot stand a heavy covering over their crowns. Use only a single layer of evergreen boughs over these.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

At my father's quick, tense query, "Emeralds? What emeralds?" I gasped in dismay, and mentally anathematized my unruly tongue. Dicky and I had agreed, at my insistence, mostly that neither of us should tell my father about the missing emeralds of Queen Olga until both of us should be present to share in the melodramatic revelation. And here, in the first ten minutes alone with my father, I had "spilled the beans."

"Will you please forget that I said that, Father?" I asked, "until Dicky can be with us? We agreed that we would tell you about it together."

Anxious for Story.

"Will you please remember," he retorted almost sternly, it seemed, "that I want to hear about those emeralds at the first possible opportunity that you, Richard and I can be together? Your mention of them may lead to my finding a link in a certain broken chain I am trying to forge again. I must know about them as soon as possible."

"Please don't tell him I was so thoughtless as to speak of them," I faltered.

"Of course not, Child." His flashing, tender smile enveloped me, warmed my heart. "You, yourself, shall broach the subject when we have our conference. But if you are not too tired, I should like to hear about them tonight."

"Of course," I said. "But I don't see how we are going to manage a conference until after Mother Graham goes to sleep."

My father's lips quirked into a smile.

Will Retire Early.

"I don't think we will have to wait very long after dinner for that contingency," he said. "Ever since Richard telephoned this morning that you were on your way home, she has been driving the Ticer family at full speed. She must be terribly fatigued."

"She won't stay awake long," I agreed with an answering smile. "I have a plan! As soon after dinner as I can manage it. I'll announce I have some things to tell her, appearing just as mysterious and melodramatic as possible, and carry her off to her room. Ten to one, she'll get into her night things and a bathrobe while we talk, and I'll break the news of the 'royal invasion'."

My father's heavy eyebrows contracted.

"Will she be—unpleasant — because you have not consulted her?" he asked a trifle militantly.

"No, I'm sure not," I answered promptly, wishing that I could be as positive as I sounded. "She is devoted to Mary, you know, and if she thinks that, by having Olina and her mother here, we can save Mary unhappiness, I am sure she will be strongly in favor of the plan."

"You are an adorable schemer," my father said fondly, and then he glanced over at the clock on his desk.

"Mrs. Ticer is a punctual soul," he said, smiling, "so I think, perhaps, we would better go down. The 20 minutes she names are almost up."

He slipped his arm around me as we walked to the door, and held me for a second in a tight embrace.

"My precious daughter," he said tenderly, "I wonder if you realize what happiness it brings me to have you home with me."

"Yes, because of my own unhappiness when you are away from home," I told him truthfully, conscious of a sudden resentment against Philip Veritzen, whose insistence upon his stringent regulations concerning rehearsals would keep me bound to Mary and the city apartment for weeks, perhaps months, to come.

If clothes are scorched in ironing, wet the scorched part, cover it with cornstarch and rub it in well. When dry, remove the cornstarch, and all trace of scorch will be removed.

Planets of major magnitude rule this day with a very important and surprising effect. The sudden and unexpected holds sway, with bold strokes having an important influence on a stabilization and possibly a reorientation of the fortunes and interests.

Those whose birthday it is stand at the threshold of an eventful year, with much stirring through bold strokes of initiative and enterprise. The forces and faculties will be found under high tension, attracting the attention of those ready to indorse and co-operate in a grand manner, but in all be wary as to speculation and untried or questionable ventures.

Knowing These Democrats Is to Vote for Them

GOOD CITIZENS OF MANSFIELD

On the 10th day of August, 1937, at the Primary Election, the Democratic Party chose its candidates. The fitness of these candidates for the office each seeks constitutes the Democratic platform.

Each man reflects a high type of citizenship and we feel is worthy of your suffrage.

It will be observed that they are a part of the business affairs of our city—every one a worker that believes in the dignity of labor and that man should eat his bread in the sweat of his brow; they are identified as employees with occupations and industries of our city.

It will be noted that each candidate is a tax-payer, a home-owner and each individually and collectively would be interested in the conducting of the city affairs, in securing for every dollar spent value received.

It will be further observed that each candidate is a head of a family and has to his credit a wife and children and has church affiliations and would be vitally interested in the welfare of the home, the church, the school and and law observance of our city.

Several of our candidates have held office and have given a good account of their stewardship.

It will be further noted that several of our candidates belong to fraternal organizations and have been taught the wisdom of charity and benevolence.

For Mayor
Claude M. Hunter

Community service, teaching, business and industry provide the background of Claude M. Hunter.
Trained at Tri-State Normal College, he taught school for a few years. He turned then to business, establishing a general store in Rome. During the eleven-year expansion of this trading area, it is typical of Mr. Hunter that he found time to act as postmaster and serve as justice-of-peace.
A little over 20 years ago, he was employed by the Ohio Brass Company, where the employees later elected him president of the company's Civic Fund Association. During the dark days of the depression, his fellow employes became intimately familiar with this phase of his work.
Meanwhile, Mr. Hunter served four years as Councilman-at-large, and is now concluding a term as Council President. He has stated that he will devote full-time effort to the responsibilities of Mayor, and that he is not bound by any individual, class, group or outside interest.
Politically, Mr. Hunter has been a consistently popular candidate. Two years ago, for example, when he was Democratic candidate for Council President, he was elected by a majority of over 700 votes.
In private life, Mr. Hunter is an active member of the South Main Evangelic Church; Venus Lodge; Ruth Chapter; O. E. S. He is married and has three daughters living in Mansfield. His home is at 312 Giessner Avenue.

Tygers Open New Series With Canton on Grid In 1938; Fill Other Dates.

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.

FEW easy assignments will be offered the gridiron representatives of Mansfield High school next fall when they tackle what is expected to be the toughest schedule in the school's history.

The Tygers will extend rivalries with Massillon, Sandusky and Akron West, perennial state championship contenders, in addition to Shelby and Ashland, and add a new foe in Canton McKinley, a power in Ohio gridiron circles for a number of years.

Points Toward Title.

McKinley, which boasts of an uncrossed goal line this year, sports the outstanding record in the scholastic field in the state this fall, and if it can get by Massillon, which the Tygers held to a 6-6 tie, it will undoubtedly be awarded the mythical state title.

Mansfield and Canton are annual rivals in basketball, but have never tangled on the gridiron. The new series is expected to develop into a keen rivalry due to the nearness of the two cities.

The first game of the new grid series will be staged in Canton, Nov. 12. Earl Mann, Mansfield high school faculty manager of athletics, said today. The Bulldogs will appear at Stadium field the following year.

Mann also announced that the Massillon game next fall will be played at a later date. The change was requested by Massillon authorities, who prefer using the early part of their schedule for home night games. The change is agreeable to Mansfield, and in all probability will be played at Stadium field Oct. 29, two weeks before the Canton game.

Massillon Follows Streaks.

The Sandusky game is scheduled two weeks before the tentative date set for the Massillon encounter. Shelby will be played, Oct. 22, between the Massillon and Sandusky tilts

Mansfield will again open the season with Akron West on the home field, Sept. 17, and close with Ashland, Nov. 19.

Four open dates remain on the schedule, but Mann expects to have the card completed within a few weeks.

Mann is now negotiating with athletic officials of Mooseheart, Ill., which is the site of the model child city sponsored by the Loyal Order of Moose, and indicated that it might be possible to bring the widely-known out-of-state team to the Tyger lair for the second game.

Mansfield has a tentative two-year home-and-home contract with Erie, Pa., Strong Vincent, which held the Tygers to a scoreless tie this fall, but it will be necessary to severe relations, according to Mann.

Erie Lacks Field.

Erie officials have notified Mann that they will be unable to play the Tygers next fall as it has no open date on its home schedule. They explained that three Erie schools use the same field, and Strong Vincent's allotment of dates has already been filled.

The tentative Mansfield schedule folows Akron West, here, Sept. 17; Mooseheart, Ill., here, Sept 4; open, Oct 1; open, Oct. 8, Sandusky, there, Oct. 15; Shelby, there, Oct. 22; Massillon, here, Oct 29; open, Nov. 5; Canton, there, Nov. 13; Ashland, there, Nov. 19.

BELLVILLE ROMPS OVER ASHLEY, 41-6

By HOWARD ALLEN.

BELLVILLE — Bellville high' fast-stepping grid combine registered another non-league victory here Friday afternoon by smothering a fighting Ashley aggregation, 41 to 6.

Bellville marked up one touchdown in the initial period and they scored in every stanza of the game.

Early in the first period, the Hodgemen started their drive for "pay dirt," and Balliett, Bellville fullback, went over the double stripe from the eight for the first tally. Clever placekicked the point, giving Bellville a 7 to 0 lead at the end of the first period.

The Bellville gridders took to the air for their second tally. Hamilton tossed a pass from the 3 to 12, where it was taken by Martin, who scampered into the end zone for the score. Balliett converted the point through center.

Bellville placed the ball in scoring position again late in the second period when Banks, skirted his own left end for 40 yards to place the ball on the one-foot line, frim which Balliett went through center for the tally. Clever placekick for the point was good and Bellville held a 21 to 0 lead at the half.

Intercepting a pass on the Ashley 35 in the third period, Hamilton returned to the 14. Balliett carried the oval from the 14 to the 1 yard marker and on the next play Balliett plunged through center for the score. Clever's placement converted the point.

Ashley started a march toward the Bellville goal late in the third frame and a pass from Thatcher to Cramer was good for the first and only Ashley tally. An attempted center plunge for the extra point failed.

Hamilton added another score early in the final period when he went through the line from the 12. Clever's placement added the point.

Balliett added the last tally of the game when he plunged over from the six. The attempted placement for the point was blocked.

Bellville chalked up 22 first downs to five for the losers.

HENRY ARMSTRONG TAKES SARRON, FEATHER TITLE

Los Angeles Colored Boy Kayoes Foe In Sixth to Become Undisputed Champion.

NEW YORK—(UP)—Henry Armstrong, 25-year-old colored boy from Los Angeles, ruled the world featherweight ranks today as the first undisputed champion in eight years.

Armstrong scored a six-round knockout over Petey Sarron, Birmingham, Ala., at Madison Square Garden last night.

Both men had claimed the title, Sarron boasting N. B. A. and foreign recognition while Armstrong was recognized only in California and Illinois. By his victory, Henry attained the first undisputed rule since Bat Battalino outgrew the feather class in 1929.

HENRY ARMSTRONG

First for Sarron.

It was the first knockout suffered by Sarron in 12 years of fighting. He started out confidently, bewildering Armstrong in the first round with his jumping-jack tactics and a whirlwind attack which all but smothered Henry.

Armstrong began to land in the second. He staggered Petey with a hard right to the chin, then drove him into the ropes with a savage left hook.

Armstrong won the third by a mile, but in a furious toe-to-toe exchange, one of his punches landed low, and Referee Arthur Donovan gave the stanza to Sarron.

The little Alabaman held Armstrong even in the fourth. This was Sarron's last stand, for as they came out for the fifth, Armstrong connected a straight right to the chin that buckled Sarron's knees.

GALION CHALKS UP 6TH STRAIGHT WIN

Once-Defeated Orangemen Roll Over Rossford, 19-9, Before 3,000 Spectators.

GALION—The once-defeated Orangemen of Galion, N. C. O. conference leader, added their sixth straight victory by defeating Rossford, 19 to 9, last night in a non-conference game. A crowd of 3,000 witnessed the tilt.

Coach Bob Corry used his reserve line in starting the game, but kept his varsity backs in play throughout the game.

The Orangemen chalked up their first tally in the initial period, when Bill Durtschi plunged off-tackle from the eight. Pangallo's placement converted the point.

Downed In End Zone.

After a penalty had placed the oval on Galion's four, a bad pass from F. Parrish, Galion center, to Schreck, Galion back, resulted in the first Rossford points. Schreck fumbled and recovered the ball in the end zone, but was downed by the Rossford forward wall to give Rossford a safety.

Bill Durtschi scored again late in the second period when he circled his own left end from the 24. Hocker's attempted placement for the point was blocked. The Orangemen led at the end of the first half, 13 to 2.

Fred Staub, Orange back, who has been on the sidelines with a sore finger the past week, came into the game to score Galion's only touchdown during the remaining half of the game.

Galion took possession of the ball on Rossford's 17 in the third stanza and then Staub broke through center for a brilliant, twisting, 15-yard run that placed the ball on the Rossford two. Staub broke through center on the next play for he score. Hocker's attempted placement for the point failed and Rossford trailed at the end of the third period by a 19 to 2 score.

Plays Stellar Role.

Ray Klepacz, playing a stellar role at left half for Rossford, gave his teammates their only touchdown after Marcinek, Rossford fullback, recovered Ernst's fumble on the Galion 13. Klepacz carried the oval to the Galion three and then went off-tackle over the double stripe for the tally. Klepacz dropped back to the 17 and dropkicked the oval squarely between the uprights for the point.

Galion chalked up 10 first downs to the losers' six and Rossford, although on the small end of the score, gave the scrappy Galion gridsters a hard battle.

HOLD-OVER members of the Mansfield Merchants await with pleasure the invasion of the Euclid, O., Spartans Sunday.

The 1936 Merchants did not lose a single game last fall, but they were held to one tie. The deadlock was played with the Euclid eleven, which comes to League park at 2:30 p. m. Sunday.

Want Win Badly.

Needless to say, Coach Max Miller and his men are anxious to avenge this tie, and Sunday may be the day they can do it, although their lineup has been weakened by injuries.

Neither "Rabbit" Siler nor Vern Heiser will be in the lineup Sunday. Siler is out for the season with a broken collar bone, and Heiser, who suffered a side injury last Sunday as the Merchants spilled the Kent Collegians 12-0, is not expected to be ready for action.

However, Johnny Burnison, ex-Heidelberg star, will again be available, and he will carry a big part of the offensive burden.

Bill Disti, late of Mansfield high, and Burnison will be at the halfbacks, with Joe Zimmerman at fullback and Iky Fetter at quarter No radical chances are contemplated by Coach Miller in the line.

The Euclid club should provide the Merchants with one of their toughest tests of the campaign Sunday It has ranked with the leading independent elevens in the state for several years, and claimed the state title last fall.

Personnel Unchanged.

The personnel of the Spartan club is changed little from last year. The changes which have been made have strengthened the team, the management of the Euclid elevn has notified Business Manager John Villella.

The same backfield of Jantz, qb; Felix, lh; Cosaro, rh, and Havlin, fb, will start for the invaders. John Felix, a 180-pounder, is the ball carrying star for Euclid.

Moose No. 1 Team Takes a Tip From Baseball

Taking a tip from baseball, the Moose No. 1 team of the Moose Traveling league have added a mascot to its roster. He is Donnie Meder, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Meder. A complete new bowling outfit has been purchased for the youngster, who, incidentally, is quite a kegler himself. Using a small, special-made ball, Donnie will bowl with the Moose in the "warm-ups" in its future matches.

Young Meder will accompany the Moose team to Mt. Vernon Sunday when they meet the Mt. Vernon team in a match in which first place is at stake.

Massillon Suffers First Setback

Massillon's powerful Tigers, defending state champions, suffered their first defeat in 27 games last night when it bowed to New Castle, Pa., 7 to 0, in Massillon.

The only other mar on the Massillon record this year is a 6-6 tie with Mansfield high.

CROP OF TUMMY ACHES

Dartmouth Discounts Seriousness of Mysterious Sickness.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(U.P.)—The seriousness of a mysterious sickness that swept Dartmouth's undefeated football team was discounted today, and Coach Earl Blaik said he did not expect his lineup for the Yale game would be changed.

Some sources characterized the illness, which struck 12 members of the squad as "mild dysentery," but Trainer Rollie Bevan said it was nothing more than minor stomach disorders. All the stricken players were well enough to undergo a drill in the Yale bowl yesterday.

THE STATE vs. ELNA JEPSON

By NANCY BARR MAVITY

(Copyright 1937)

CHAPTER II

"My time during recess is my own," she said. "I want to use a part of it to tell you that I despise you more than any person I have ever known. My life is not worth much, but it is worth much more than your game of politics."

Her white fury sent the matron two steps backward.

"I'll report you for threat and insubordination," she half screamed. "I'm your guard, and you treat me worse than a servant."

"Another of my errors," Elna answered. "Perhaps I could have bribed you—I don't know. But I've always treated my servants as honest human beings. You don't seem to be in that category."

She slipped past the matron on the stairs to her own unlocked cell door. No one must see the despair in her face. She had ruined Jamieson, and it could not be helped.

She sat in the window of her cell and deliberately lighted a cigaret. The crowd was still milling outside, with a mob intuition that something would happen in the afternoon. Yells rose to the window. For the first time she heard the inarticulate shrieks, the hysterical cries of lynchers. She had never heard them before, but she knew them.

Someone, with a curse, demanded that she extinguish her cigaret. She felt her face flaming. She heard her voice, high and strange.

"You're welcome; it means nothing to me." She flung the cigaret through the bars. But she remained in the window seat, her eyes closed. Hysteria must be theirs, not her. Perhaps she would never reach the afternoon session. What she would do, if she got there, she still did not know. The growl of hate rose with the crowd's antagonism to her indifference.

At first she was unconscious of another presence in the room. Then a tug at her skirt called her attention to the plump, hard-faced, henna-haired matron, standing close behind her.

"You'd better get away from that window," she whispered.

"I shall sit where I like," Elna whirled.

"Yes," the matron snarled. "But if those people break into this rattletrap jail after you, they'll believe what I've hinted here and there. They won't blame me, because I'll do my duty and try to protect you. Jamieson will take the rap, and not even his friend the sheriff can protect him. I'm not so dumb, after all, Lady Vere de Vere. My brother wants to run for sheriff. Breaking Jamieson will break the sheriff. And it's going to happen. How's that?"

"Not very clever." Elna answered. "I've learned a lot from Jamieson. In the first place, you should not have told me, been so sure. In the second place, since you tell me to leave the window, I know I must stay there. And I know why."

For the first time she forgot that she was held for murder. She thrust her face to the bars, pushing her hair back, looking down at the upturned faces.

"People!" she cried, and at the unexpected voice the growling died down. "Most of you dislike me, and you're probably right. Most of you think me guilty of murder. But that doesn't matter. I don't matter. I do know that if I had left this window you would have thought me afraid. I haven't been afraid very many times. I promise to give you my life without struggle. I'll probably be convicted anyway, whether I'm guilty or innocent."

A gasp broke the breathless silence below, at this unprecedented frankness. Elna's hand clapsed the window bars as if she could never let them go.

"The matron has just come here to tell me that this jail is a rattletrap—that you can break into it at will. You don't need to. I will come out to you. She told me that if you broke in against Jailer Jamieson he would either be dismissed or his sheriff would be broken at the next election. That is probably true. You must know more about these things than I.

"But it is I whom you dislike—I whom you may kill on the way to the 2 o'clock session, if you wish. Do you want to know what Mr. Jamieson and I talked about, while the matron listened? He told me about the dogs he had picked up in the street, and how his wife scolded him about his menagerie."

Laughter rippled below, and Elna's fingers relaxed.

"He came to see me because I was the only prisoner who has no visitors, which is true. He said I reminded him of a sick dog he nursed once."

Above the laughter, Elna caught a voice: "If that isn't just what old Jamie would say!"

She knew then she had won. They recognized her quotations as authentic. She had saved Jamieson. The crowd had overflowed the courthouse yard. There were enough of them. The matron's insinuations would fall flat. Somewhere deep in her brain a remembered voice was saying in her father's tones: "Well done, chit."

Her hair was tangled in the rusty iron bars. Unaccustomed tears streamed down her cheeks. From the courthouse square she heard a roar of voices shouting, "Good old Jamieson!" They had forgotten her for the thing she had fought for. That was right. She need not fight any more. She knew then that the farce of her trial was over. She would plead guilty at the afternoon session. Too much was against her—and she was too tired.

Elna had just turned to fling herself on her couch when the tramp of steps up the narrow stairs startled her. Her eyes widened. Had she failed after all?

The commotion was upon her before she could disentangle its meaning. Jamieson was pushing the matron down the hallway as Elna reached the door. His voice was deep and official. "The sheriff wishes to see you at once with regard to dispensing with your services," he said against her screaming protests.

"'I can't do that?' No, I couldn't, but the sheriff can. And when I say he'll make investigations, I mean that, if necessary, he'll make 'em and make 'em stick. Joe Mahoney is still boss of this county, and you forgot it a bit too soon. Never forget too soon."

Elna, even in her bewilderment, noted that he pushed the matron down the stairs with one of his homemade epigrams. Then Jamieson was upon her, shaking her by both shoulders. His fat putty face was red with anger, as she had never seen it before.

"So you'd call my jail a rattletrap, would you?" he sputtered. "So you'd make every prisoner in it think he could get out with a safety pin and make a monkey of Rob Jamieson? Not but that he couldn't if he knew how, and I've told you many's the time I've begged for a new building. Now I wish I had one with a special dungeon, with spiders and snakes, just for you!

"So you thought you had to save my job for me, and my jail for me, and stick your nose into county politics, the which, if I may say so, you know precious little about." His voice strove to hold its anger, but its high notes broke in a sudden quaver.

"And you did it, you crazy little fool, you did it! You stood there where you might have got smashed in the face with a rock any minute. You knew there'd be a stink from the other side if they got through the jail door. You smashed the one stool pigeon in the place and made them believe you. And you'll probably take the rap for murder, and I'm your jailer, and I never done nothin'—nothin' for you—" From the quivering of his body and hiding of his bald head against her shoulder she knew that he was trying to hide a tendency to tears.

Elna's first thought was that he was a very odd man to be a jailer and a county machine politician. He wouldn't understand, anyway, if she tried to explain. She was not sure she understood, herself.

"Thanks," she said, pushing him away and straightening his wrinkled uniform. "But it really was very little to do for my one visitor. I'm going to quit this game this afternoon, anyway. I shall change my plea to guilty."

"No!" Jamieson's fat face looked singularly like that of a fish as his mouth widened. "Does your lawyer know?"

"No. My father taught me to take my own way, and I've had enough of this, that's all."

"Look here." Elna understood now how Jamieson looked as a politician. He leaned forward, hands clasped with unexpected strength between his knees, his forehead corrugated like a washboard. "I've seen lots of 'em break when things looked bad, from sheer strain. I've seen 'em guilty as hell without turning a hair.

Mrs. Williams remembered that Mary Lee's name had been Ipock, too.

So Mrs. Williams wrote to Jefferson City for the records, and Wednesday they arrived. There was no doubt, Ben and Mary Lee were brother and sister.

Knowing how devoted the couple was, Mrs. Williams thought she would give them a pleasant surprise. She called them into the house and told them. The look that Mrs. Williams saw on their faces was one of dismay.

Then they explained to her. They were married when they went to visit the Yocum farm together a month ago.

There was only one solution. Ben and Mrs. Williams went to Mountain Grove and got Mrs. Yocum. They all went to Hartville with their lawyers and explained it to the district judge. He granted the annulment.

the best mayor I possibly can."

Hunter's talk, which was brief and in the personal style that has characterized his public utterances throughout the campaign, included a tribute to Atty. A. S. Beach, Democratic campaign manager.

"We made no mistake in naming Mr. Beach to head the campaign," he said. "The meetings have been more than we expected."

Attacking the Republican seven-point platform, Beach aimed his criticism at the statements on civil service extension and the submitting of bonds to the vote of the people.

"As the 'official smearer' of this campaign, I can present the court records to show that every statement I have made about the Republican candidate (Bierly) and his platform are supported by facts," he said.

He flayed Bierly for his record in council which, he said, indicated what the people might expect of him as mayor.

Sees Big Dem Victory.

"The Republicans as head of the municipal government have been weighed and found wanting, and I predict one of the biggest margins for Mr. Hunter that has been given a mayoralty candidate here in the past 50 years," Beach asserted.

John F. Correll, president of the Young Democratic club and chairman of the meeting, called on the Democrats to "get Paul Kelley (Democratic city auditor) out of quarantine at the city hall. He has been surrounded by Republicans for the past two years," Correll said, "and he hasn't yet put up the white flag. We are the ones who can put Democrats in the city hall to work with him."

Hurling charges of mismanagement at the present administration, Correll said "the handling of municipal affairs in the past two years has been so obviously inefficient that well-meaning citizens have suggested changing our form of government. We don't need a change of form, just different men at the head of it."

Another speaker, Atty. Lewis Brucker, pointed to the Mansfield Conservancy district as "one of the things the Republicans have not explained." He quoted figures from the conservancy report, and labeled the project as "a result of Republican action in council 10 years ago."

In an attack on the labor record of Congressman Dudley A. White, of Norwalk, who spoke at a Republican rally here Thursday night, Atty. George W. Biddle read a letter purportedly from a Norwalk labor leader which described White as "against labor in his voting in congress."

"Contrary to the statements of Republicans that they have the backing of organized labor, the election returns since 1932 show that labor has been on the Democratic side," Biddle declared.

PRICES POINT UPWARD DURING EARLY TRADING

Announcement of New Series of Market Inquiries Interests Dealers.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Stocks generally pointed upward in today's early market proceedings, although here and there issues displayed slipping inclinations.

Followers of the rails noted, in connection with the plea of the roads for a 15 per cent flat boost in shipping rates, the study of the interstate commerce commission indicating one-fifth of the potential freight tonnage of the country has been diverted from rail carriers to competing forms of transportation since 1923.

Interest was shown in the announcement of Chairman Douglas of the securities and exchange commission that a new series of inquiries into stock market activities would be launched. These are to include transactions for foreign accounts; short sales, cash and margin dealings; volume of puts and calls; member trading and specialists orders.

CITY ACTS IN COAL STRIKE

Mayor Arranges Meeting With Dealers and Union; Says Blockade Hits Building.

the union—the closed shop and the "check-off."

A committee of five was named to continue negotiations with the union. Its members are Clyde Estes of the Estes Coal company; Fred Black, of M. L. Branan and Bro. company; R. O. Davies of Kallmerten and Baer; Howard Hart of Builders' Supply company, and Henry Carew of the Mansfield Transfer and Storage company.

Dealers said this morning that they were still delivering coal under the terms of the agreement set up when the coal strike started last Wednesday.

Spokesmen for the dealers said several dealers had signed contracts with their own drivers, effective for one year, governing wages, and asserted that "the drivers are satisfied." They did not disclose details of the agreements, nor which firms had signed.

Twenty coal and building supply firms were represented at the meeting.

Calls Union Meeting.

Huntsman, who said yesterday that the decision reached at last night's meeting of the dealers would be accepted by the union as "final," called a union meeting at Trades Council hall this morning, but could not be reached at the close of the meeting for a statement of what had transpired. He also declined to say before the meeting, what the purpose was. He said he was trying to get in touch with the dealers to see what their answer was, but "didn't know what he would do."

He could not be reached for comment on Mayor McFarland's pronouncement that whether or not dealers and the union reached an agreement, the city would insist that normal deliveries be resumed by Monday.

Non-Union Men Organize.

While the union apparently was standing firm on its demands, non-union drivers were preparing today to set up their own organization, consisting on the right to return to work.

Harvey Armstrong, driver for the Kallerten and Baer company, leader of the movement, said 50 drivers who are not members of the union had registered with Chief Bates, signifying their desire to go back to their jobs, that those 50 men were out seeking to sign up 30 others, and that his organization hoped to meet with Bates this afternoon to work out a plan to permit their resuming their jobs by the "first of the week."

Non-union drivers who met at city building yesterday asserted that the union had a membership of only 13 in the 15 companies they represented and that there were 46 non-union drivers working in the same yards, who did not desire a strike or blockade.

"We now have at least one representative in every yard in the city," Armstrong said today. "We want the public to know that we are not striking. There are just a few union members here, but they have imported sympathizers from Akron and other cities. They are employing strong-arm methods to induce us to join the union through the closed shop plan and the 'check-off.'

Say They Have No Grievances.

"We have no grievance with our employers. Our wages and working conditions are satisfactory.

"And," he added, "If the employers sign the agreement with the union, we will refuse to work under those terms."

Neither Chief Bates nor Sheriff E. P. Long would comment on the mayor's statement that "deliveries must be resumed Monday," and at noon today, no meeting of city officials and the opposing sides in the strike had been arranged.

TWO PERMITS

Two building permits with a total estimated valuation of $7,700 were issued at the city building yesterday.

The construction licenses went to E. L. Myers for the erection of a $7,500 dwelling on Davis road and to Mike Heckel, 214 Rowland avenue, who will build a garage at the cost of $200.

Ruling Due Today On New Mooney Fight for Freedom

Not That It Matters

—By JANE WILLIAMS

OF THE maze of rumors surrounding the Duke of Windsor, the most astounding is that which would make him emperor of Germany. And yet, when it is analyzed, it is so logical that it becomes a strong probability.

In a copyrighted article in the Kansas City Star early this week, a widely known commentator writing under the pen name of William Chapman, says that England is disturbed to the point of agitation over the rumor that when Adolf Hitler spoke of his successor recently, he had in mind the exiled ex-king, the Duke of Windsor. The author says the story has been whispered for months, but was not spoken of openly until the recent visit of the Duke to Germany.

The careful student of history will see nothing extraordinary in an English prince sitting on the throne of Germany; it is amazing only that Hitler should consider —if indeed he does—a restoration of the monarchy.

Germany's last emperor, Wilhelm II, was a grandson of Queen Victoria, and Edward is her great-grandson. Victoria herself married a German and made him her consort. The two royal families were thus closely related and there has always been a strong bond between them. The royal family name in fact was distinctly German and was changed to Windsor only during the World war.

* * *

NOW IT is said that Edward has always been pro-German in his sympathies, and is particularly sympathetic to Hitler's plans for the working people of Germany; and that Hitler is more than eager for a strong entente between the two countries, for anyone can see that with Germany's army and England's navy, there would be an invincible alliance. And Hitler might have in mind those other kings of Europe who wear a crown and ornament a throne—while a dictator rules the country.

What no one has said, but what must be apparent to everyone is that the Duchess of Windsor is not the type to take punishment sitting down; and as the Empress of Germany she would be in a nice position to tell Queen Elizabeth, who has snubbed her, to go fly a royal kite.

While the average American doesn't give a hoot who sits on whose throne, it would be a lot of fun to see Edward make a move whereby he could take a couple of jumps and land in the king row again.

And THINK of Mr. Baldwin's face!

About the time you're reading this—we hope—your correspondent will be snugly ensconced in the jolly little (?) Netherland Plaza at Cincinnati, than which there isn't any whicher in American hostelries. And we'll be listening to a woman who is the perfect example of Modern Woman.

Alice Hughes, who is the speaker at the annual banquet of the Ohio Newspaper Women's association, has found the perfect balance between a home and career and has compromised with neither. On one side she is a home maker, very much in love with a talented and famous husband and the mother of an adopted 5-year-old son. On the other side, a newspaper columnist, world traveler, observer of world events and politics, dictator of fashion and arbiter of glamor, and elected one of the ten best dressed women in America.

It doesn't seem quite fair for one woman to have so much, does it? Oh well, she isn't engaged to Clark Gable or Robert Taylor.

AT THE MEETING last Monday night of the juvenile delinquency advisory committee, police heads, probate judge and probation officers, to discuss the problem of handling juvenile cases, the suggestion was offered that a juvenile court be established aside from the probate work and that specially trained juvenile workers be hired for investigation.

It is, of course, the real solution to Mansfield's increasing problem, as we suggested here last Saturday. There should be a separate court for domestic relations and juvenile cases, and there should be trained workers for investigation, and a judge who knows when to hand out leniency and when to hand out a sock on the button, for the good of the entire community . . .

BUT, we haven't got the money. We won't have the money for some time. We can't ask for it right now.

* * *

IN THE meantime, what is the best solution? The answer to that also came at the advsiory committee meeting. It came from attorneys, police and welfare workers.

It was a suggestion to the probate court to "stiffen up its backbone" on the cases that DO come before it and which have been investigated, rather than turning all offenders back to circulation with repeated "warnings."

It was a nice, friendly, helpful meeting, but there wasn't any mistake about public feeling on the matter.

* * *

ONE OF THE regrettable features of the juvenile delinquency increase is its effect on many citizens who will go to the polls net Tuesday to vote against the playground tax levy. Their argument is that in spite of the playgrounds, juvenile delinquency has increased tremendously. So why the expense?

Which is misguided and unsound reasoning, and if Mansfield refuses to appropriate a playground fund again, it will be a definite and serious step backward. The playgrounds are no longer luxuries, they are community necessities.

In one district in Philadelphia a juvenile judge found a minimum of 12 cases a week were coming to him from one district in the city. He suggested a playground with supervised recreational activities, and in six months the cases from that district had been reduced to two a week.

Mansfield has voted for this same playground levy twice before—it comes up for a vote every five years—and regardless of economic stress, it has never failed to pass. Before 1927 the playgrounds were financed by the Community Fund. To vote down the levy this year means that the playgrounds will revert again to the Community Fund—and you'll foot the bill in the long run, one way or another.

Even if there were no definite moral and community good to be gained from the playgrounds, there would still be need enough for them. They provide a place for the youngsters to congregate under supervision, and keep them off the streets.

Capture One Bird Brother, Hunt Second

DEPUTIES NAB JAIL-BREAKER WITHOUT SHOT

Wife Also Held Captive, Search for Escaped Kin Pushed By Authorities.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Federal agents scratched Frand Bird, convicted slayer and bank robber, from their list of "wanted men" today and turned to the search for his younger brother, Charles, only member of the Bird brothers' gang who escaped from the Cuyahoga county jail over a month ago still at large.

Frank Bird and his wife, Sylvia, also a fugitive, were trapped in a bulletless capture late last night as they drove up to the home of Mrs. Bird's mother, Mrs. Anna Seiber, in suburban Mayfield Heights, and walked into the house.

Sheriff Claims Credit.

Sheriff Martin L. O'Donnell said he had been informed by his men that the capture had been made by deputies and that Federal men had arrived after the capture.

O'Donnell said his deputies were in the house as Bird's wife walked in and that a member of the family was instructed to go out and tell Frank that the coast was clear.

Frank then came in and was captured, O'Donnell said.

"Shoot if you want," Bird was quoted as saying. He offered no resistance. Following the capture, the sheriff said his deputies notified Celveland and suburban police and Federal men. A .38 caliber revolver was found on Frank, the sheriff said.

Federal Men Silent.

FBI agents refused to discuss the capture or say where the couple had been taken. At the county jail reporters were denied admittance by sheriff's deputies.

Bird and his brother, accompanied by James Widmer, escaped from the county jail here September 23, in a daring armed break and a wild automobile chase through the city streets, letving in their wake a fatally injured woman who their speeding car struck down.

On October 15, Widmer was captured in Philadelphia in a stolen car. The gangster told detectives he had left the Birds in Pittsburgh with their wives.

"OLD NO. 6" TO LEAD FINAL PARADE OF LANCASTER TRAMS

LANCASTER—(U.P.)—"Old No. 6" will lead the procesison of Lancaster's 41-year-old trolley cars on their last mile ride today, better off, perhaps, for the foresight of Joe Smith, traction company superintendent.

Joe kept No. 6 — the "honor car" among the ancient conveyances—in the barn all day yesterday. And Joe felt today his action was justified, for last night an automobile plowed into No. 15 on her last commercial run to the West Side and added another dent in her old battered hulk.

So today, the dozen cars will line up on Lancaster's Main street behind old No. 6 and, with pomp and ceremony, carry the citizenry to the car barns.

Today's trip is expected to be less eventful for old No 6 than its inaugural run on a hot July day in 1896. On that occasion the "flagship" of the line stopped smack in front of the Martens hotel and refused to budge for a full 24 hours until repairs had been made.

As in 1896, Henry P. Peters, now traction company president, will be at the helm of old No. 6. Immediately behind will be the famous old summer car carrying the Boys' Industrial school band.

The Lancaster high school band will precede No. 6 on foot. The public will ride free to the barns on the rest of the trollies.

At the terminus, five shiny new buses will be waiting to carry the customers back downtown, free, and a new mode of transportation will be officially inaugurated.

The buses took up their regular routes this morning, but the street cars maintained their services for purely sentimental reasons.

CONVICT BACK ON PEN TOWER

Renews 'Sit-Down' Strike for Ohio Parole, as Guards Probe Escape Try By Trio.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— James Mason, 39, Ohio penitentiary's altitude sit-down striker, was back on the prison's 150-foot water tower for the second time this month, demanding a parole today.

While Warden James C. Woodard was investigating the attempted escape of three other convicts today, Mason broke out of line and climbed the ladder leading to the water tower's catwalk high above the walled enclosure.

Mason first tried his lofty protest tactics on Oct. 3 when he remained aloft for 12 hours because the parole board had turned down his application.

He was committed from Lucas county on May 18, 1931, sentenced to a 5 to 20 years term for operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent.

Three weeks ago Mason came down from the water tower voluntarily after he became cold and rain-soaked.

Guard James Richards frustrated the attempted break early today when he fired two shots at Paul and Bernard Tvasko, brothers, and Frank Persa, all of Cleveland, as they tried to climb over the wall with a crude ladder.

Up and Down THE STREET

The well-known absent-minded professor has a counterpart in a political campaign chairman at election time, Carlton S. Fernyak, G.O.P. strategist, decided yesterday. With the worries of a municipal campaign on his mind, Fernyak headed a searching party in the vicinity of Park avenue and Walnut street late yesterday—all because he couldn't remember where he left his car. City Solicitor H. H. Schettler was called into the hunt and when last seen Fernyak and Schettler were headed in different directions mumbling things about leaving cars at home and walking downtown.

The muskrat should have known that he didn't belong in a busy place like the middle of West Third street near Mulberry at such a busy time as Saturday morning. But there he was, and his lack of familiarity with traffic dodging cost him his life. A car ran over him. A lot of passersby saw him, but not many of them were able to identify the animal, which may mean that Mansfielders aren't up on their nature study. Some thought he was a groundhog, others guessed a woodchuck, and some even hazarded that it might be an overgrown sewer rat. But to settle the matter, it wasn't. It was a dead muskrat, just another traffic victim.

The mystery of the whereabouts of "Bree" Thornburg, Shelby one-man rooting section, on Saturday when the Shelby and Mansfield high school football teams played has been solved. Thornburg was in Akron trying to root Baldwin-Wallace to a victory against Akron U., but was unsuccessful, the Berean, like Shelby, losing. Thornburg, now resides in Berea, never misses a Shelby-Mansfield game if he can help it. Mansfield fans missed the husky voice of the No. 1 Shelby fan Saturday.

DECISION ON HABEAS CORPUS ORDER READY

Prisoner and Attorney Expect Refusal, Plan to Go to U. S. Supreme Court.

SAN FRANCISCO—(U.P.)—The supreme court of California prepared to announce at 10 a. m. (1 p. m. EST) today its decision on Thomas J. Mooney's application for a writ of habeas corpus, which would free him from a life sentence in San Quentin prison.

Both Mooney and his attorney, George Davis, were said to be expecting an unfavorable decision, but in that event the way would be opened for a new appeal in Mooney's behalf for the supreme court of the United States.

Mooney was convicted of the Preparedness day bombing outrage here in 1916, when 10 persons were killed during a patriotic parade. The charge that his trial was prejudiced because of his labor union activities made his a "cause celebre" for labor organizations throughout the world, inspired numerous leagues and committees for his defense and has resulted in an unceasing, 21-year fight for his freedom.

Claims Jerjury, Prejudice.

The habeas corpus petition was filed in 1934, based on the same grounds as previous appeals —that prosecution witnesses at his trial had perjured themselves, and that the trial was prejudiced. For the arduous task of pouring through old files of the case, conducting hearings in several cities and taking testimony from numerous witnesses, the California court appointed Addison Shaw, a San Francisco attorney, to represent it.

The hearings required a year. Shaw took evidence in Maryland, Oregon, Wyoming and San Francisco. Mooney was moved from prison to the San Francisco county jail so that he could attend the hearing here.

Favors Denial.

After the evidence was in, and final arguments delivered, Shaw said he would recommend that the habeas corpus petition be denied.

The habeas corpus petition was necessary because when the case was taken before the U. S. supreme court, the Washington judges declined to rule on it. They said that Mooney's lawyers had not then exhausted the facilities of California courts. This petition was their last recourse in the state, and Davis already was preparing to appear again before the U. S. supreme court with a new appeal, expecting an adverse decision here today.

DRIVE CAREFULLY SAVE LIVES

If candidates were as good performers as they are promisers everything would be fine.

As we become civilized, radio will give less time to commercial ballyhoo and bum jokes and cheap songs, and take up the job of general enlightenment.

Dalhover, of the Brady gang, is to be tried by the federal government, thus avoiding possibility that he might be regarded as "a home town boy who made good."

Four Ballots for Mansfield Voters.

MANSFIELD voters will have four ballots to mark when they go to the polls next Tuesday.

The largest is for election of city officials, the Democratic and Republican tickets being side by side, with a circle at the top of each—for the x-mark indicating a "straight" vote.

Space is provided in front of the name of each candidate for mayor, president of council, treasurer, solicitor, councilmen-at-large and ward councilman, so that the voter's "x" will indicate preference in each instance.

Another ballot is for selection of township officers; the third is for non-partisan choice of three members of the Mansfield board of education, and the fourth is for continuance of the present one-tenth of a mill tax levy to provide for the maintenance of Mansfield's playgrounds and recreational program.

Should Be Annual Affair.

LAST NIGHT'S Halloween celebration, with its big parade, and concentration of activities in the downtown section, was remindful of the Halloween parties held in Mansfield regularly for a number of years—originated and repeatedly sponsored by the late Fred Hunt.

More recently a number of other cities have adopted the plan of providing Halloween entertainment and amusement for the children, thus furnishing an outlet for youthful exuberance without subjecting the entire city to the property damage and annoyance which otherwise attaches to observance of this occasion.

Last night's party, from the standpoint of large participation and the lively interest of thousands of spectators, indicates the advisability of organized co-operation in carrying through such an event each Halloween, with such elaboration as additional funds would make possible.

Mansfield Attracts Tourists.

WITHOUT making any definite effort along that line, Mansfield comes in for a nice share in the money that is spent each year by tourists as they travel around the country.

Mansfield, as you may have noted, is so located as to make an excellent over-night stopping place for motorists making long-distance trips and who recognize this as a city in which they can find entertainment, comfortable lodging, good food and well-stocked stores.

A survey indicates that this year's tourist business in Mansfield will run between $300,000 and $400,000—with every likelihood that this could be steadily increased if more attention were paid to it.

Not only do tourists patronize hotels, restaurants and filling stations, but also, in many instances, they attend theaters and also visit stores for items of merchandise for which a need arises or which attracts their notice.

The main highways passing through Mansfield are important factors in bringing many thousands of motorists through this city—and the more that can be influenced to stop and shop, the better it will be for everybody concerned.

Will Refuse Gasoline to Drunks.

HAVING attained the unenviable distinction of heading the list with largest traffic toll of any city in its class, Columbus plans drastic action to remedy an intolerable situation.

As a quick move in that direction Franklin county gasoline dealers voted unanimously this week to refuse to sell gasoline to any driver who shows indications of being under the influence of intoxicants.

While such action falls far short of solving the problem of drunken driving—which is held responsible for a large percentage of traffic accidents—it is at least a step in the direction of removing dangerous drivers from streets and highways—until the point is eventually reached where drunken driving is treated as a major offense rather than as a boyish prank.

Little effort has been made in Mansfield to PREVENT drunken driving. The time may come when it will be regarded as advisable to station a police officer at each night club, from midnight until the 2:30 closing time, to prevent intoxicated persons from getting behind the wheel of a car.

The Franklin county idea of filling station operators and attendants refusing to sell gasoline to intoxicated persons is also worthy of consideration here.

Another Editorial From Kansas.

TODAY'S column by O. O. McIntyre, which appears alongside, is given largely to reprinting an editorial which appeared originally in Wichita, Kan., Beacon, and which Mr. McIntyre believes will rival in popularity that other famous Kansas editorial, the William Allen White masterpiece, "What's the Matter With Kansas?"

The editorial to which McIntyre gives his column today was written by R. E. Josh Wilson a few months before his death, apparently as a sudden inspiration one afternoon when he was seated at his desk.

Whether or not you have been a regular reader of McIntyre, this is a column which you would not care to miss—and one which you may wish to clip for your scrapbook.

A nature note says that sap runs up some trees at the rate of eight inches a minute—and into them at sixty miles an hour.

Time marches on! It is now the girl in the ad who is willing to take a long walk to get her favorite cigaret.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

ANOTHER editorial out of Kansas threatens to rival in popularity the famous William Allen White masterpiece: "What's the matter with Kansas?" Shortly before his passing a few months ago, R. E. Josh Wilson, editorial writer on the Wichita Beacon, penned the now famous: "When I Die."

It runs: When I die I shall accomplish in the millionth of the twinkling of an eye that which science through the ages has been unable to achieve. I shall have learned the secrets of the universe. Unfettered, I shall have proceeded the farthest star of the universal nebulae. . . .

Knowledge of the infinite will be mine when I die. While loved ones gather round, perhaps to mourn, I shall know that in the heavens are many mansions. I have seen them on dark nights as I have contemplated the skies. And beyond those are countless more.

On Asterion may my spirit rest or I may pass through gates of pearl into a home of golden thoroughfares on a star the light of which has not yet reached the world wherein I have had my being. Or I may choose a planet for eternal residence, that its rays may be observed by those I loved below.

When I die, tho no shackles bind me, there will continue the ties of love which endure when the heart no longer throbs, warm blood no more to course through arteries that withered as twilight neared, the soul to soar in timeless flight. Thus I shall not be detached from things of precious memory, ages passing as swiftly as an instant is told by the hour glass within the garden's lovely walls. I may view from the firmament of space the tread, the dissolution and the resurrection of those whom I left behind. I shall be ecstatic, for their good deeds will have sweetened my everlasting peace, their remissness of trivial moment before the great jurist who determines destinies.

When I die I shall mingle with kings who loved their fellowmen on earth, with commoners whose exalted works placed them near the throne on high. Trillions who have gone to dust to rise again will pass before me and I will know them all; for souls may remain as individuals yet they are as one, even as the sea is the assembling of drops of water drawn together through nature's powers.

Should my grievous worldly faults consign me to existence as an earth-bound soul until penance has been done, I shall be satisfied as I proceed through lower astral planes. I shall have no ills of body and my mind will prove serene in the knowledge that as I achieve atonement I shall be admitted to eternal joys. I will suffer no hunger or thirst nor will I endure distress for lack of shelter as I pass over extensive distances on the wings of night, unhindered by the elements.

I may look in upon a quiet fireside where sit those who were my friends, I may seek them out tho they are beyond vast oceans in widely scattered lands. I may contemplate them in their endeavors, tho one is in London, another in antipodes Physical space will mean nothing as I continue earth bound in expiation I shall enjoy earthly contacts, yet be among the immortals.

Should it be that there is naught beyond the grave, still shall have been given me the greatest of boons that humankind desires.

What sweeter blessing do we ask than dreamless sleep? That shall be mine, should it be that when the soul takes flight from its encasement of flesh and bone it is no more. I shall then be beyond the sufferings of vitality, no uncertainties awaiting me in a celestial void. Priceless sleep! Why fear to die?

Note: Mr. Wilson was one of the quiet contemplators of existence so often found writing anonymously for the editorial pages. Although not conscious of the great change so many thinkers now call translation, he was in the shadow of Death, when one day at his desk he was suddenly inspired to write this epic so different from his usual vein. It was only a short while later that he rather prophetically and quite fearlessly faced the experience the late Charles Frohman on a sinking ship called "life's greatest adventure."

MIDDLE OF THE ROAD SEEMS SAFER

Will Let Democrats Fight Among Themselves

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Republicans will be little heard from at the extra session of congress beginning Nov. 15. Nor will they be much heard from at the regular session, beginning Jan. 3.

There are not enough of them on Capitol Hill to be more than faintly audible, even if they desired to create plenty of noise. But they do not desire to do so, anyway. Legislative outsiders, like Herbert Hoover, Alf M. Landon and John D. M. Hamilton seem disposed to stir up a racket but the policy of those who come to Washington is to put the soft pedal on, in order to leave the Democrats as free as possible to quarrel between themselves.

There is every prospect that the Democrats will oblige the G. O. P. strategists. They are piling into the capital now and evidently they are full of fight.

* * *

FIGHT WITHIN PARTY.

Obviously it will be an intra-Democratic scrap.

It will be over current issues, of course, but it will be conducted with a view to future considerations.

In part it will be contemplative of next year's congressional nominating primaries. New Deal law-makers naturally assume that they will have administrative support in their effort to be re-selected as candidates to succeed themselves at 1938's November elections.

Anti-New Deal Democrats, however, feel no such certainty. Postmaster General Farley has said that there will be "no reprisals" against them, but they have their doubts. And about one-fourth to one-third of congress' Democrats are more or less anti-New Deal.

So here is the making of a vicious internal party conflict between Nov. 15 and next spring.

* * *

WHEELER BACK WITH F.D.R.?

Not all Democratic anti-New Dealers are 100 per centers.

For example, Senator Burton K. Wheeler made himself known as a violent "anti" by reason of his opposition, President Roosevelt's supreme court enlargement plan, but, in the main, he was a New Dealer. If the administration drops the court plan presumably he will be, in other respects, a New Dealer again.

But there are other Democratic statesmen who are anti-New Deal on broad principles.

* * *

NOT NEW DEALERS.

These, largely, are the southerners.

They object, not only to supreme court enlargement, but to numerous other New Deal legislative proposals — notably the wage-and-hour bill and to anti-lynching legislation on a federal scale.

In short, these folk are not New Dealers at all.

Yet they are Democrats, as politically defined.

They do not particularly care about next spring's primaries or the subsequent election day; they expect to win both times, Dixie, being so dependable.

They look ahead to 1940.

* * *

SOUTHERNERS' AIM.

The south's aim, then, is to go into the 1940 Democratic national convention with the complaint that the Rooseveltian so-called Democratic administration has not been genuinely Democratic.

Their notion, this autumn and next winter and spring, is to win back the Democratic organization to what they consider Democracy.

They will strive for it like tigers.

Thus the coming extra session of congress is not alone to be reckoned with. The equation involves also the 1939 and 1940 regular sessions, and whatever additional extra sessions there may be in the meantime.

The rumpus is just in its incipiency.

Short Cut to Fame.

From Hollywood comes the jubilant assurance that John Montague, alias Laverne Moore, golfer extraordinary, prince of good fellows and pal of movie stars, recently acquitted of a seven-year-old robbery charge, will make a million dollars in seven years.

The word is that the public is panting in eagerness to see him play golf, to hear his voice over the radio, to read the words of wisdom his versatile mind turns out.

In fact about the only thing that hasn't been promised him is a seat on the U. S. supreme court bench, but maybe they're saving that as a surprise.

Mr. Montague has had a great deal of national publicity during the past year. Possibly he is a charming fellow, a highly talented young man, and all that, but there's something about the whole business that is highly nauseating. Somehow we do not feel that the movies, radio nor anything else will be particularly increased in public estimate by their policy of grabbing onto every character that manages to acquire widespread notoriety. — Ohio State Journal.

Listen, World!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

Expose Yourself to Beauty.

THIS isn't a financial column, but there's no harm in passing on a swell tip to a friend. So—

Want to get in on a good thing? Then listen—

I've just made one of the best bargains of my life. It cost me $3.95—and 20 minutes a day for two weeks. But, by conservative estimate, I'm at least $25,000 wealthier in actual cash—and immeasurably enriched in all other departments of my life. How come?

I've "exposed myself to beauty."

Odd phrase, isn't it? I borrowed it from my "investment"—said investment being 677 pages of the finest talk that ever slid from pen or typewriter Hendrik Willem Van Loon did it . . . called it "The Arts" . . . and Simon & Schuster published it. All of which sounds like another one of those highbrow headaches issued in the name of literature. But 'tisn't.

Here is the story of beauty. The story of how beauty began as a vague restlessness, reaching in the heart of men . . . and spread . . . and grew . . . and bloomed into painting and sculpture, architecture and music.

Here is a story of beauty. But you do not know you are learning something when you read it. You do not even know you are reading. You have gone a long way off from books. You are a naked barbarian, 20,000 years ago, crouching in your cave—scratching the race's first dim pictures on its sooty walls—with the stench of gnawed bones in your flattened nose and a strange dream forming in your awakening brain.

Or you are a troubadour in ragged gilt and velvet, singing your way through feudal castles and bawdy inns—

Or a cloistered monk in a stone wall, illuminating priceless vellum with shivering hands—

Or a laughing Greek in the Golden Age, with the world at your haughty feet.

Here is the story of beauty. But it it not a big-word book filled with an outsize language and yawns. It is the story of men . . and the reaching dream in the hearts of men. The story of laughter and love, murder and rape . . . moonlight on a Roman temple . . . and a song trembling through the reeds at dawn.

As thrilling—and exciting to read—and almost as bloody in parts—as the latest detective yarn.

As riotous as a football game—or a wolf hunt.

As hauntingly lovely as Juliet's first kiss.

All that in one book. Plain words—easy words—as if you were talking to yourself Pictures everywhere—easy pictures—as if you drew them yourself. And always the story of beauty unrolling as if it had come out of yourself. As, of course, it did. For this is the story of MAN, as well as the story of beauty . . . of men, and all the things he has been and done . . . you, yourself, among them.

The sort of a book you'd write if you were going to write a book. Actually it took a very smart man thirty years of hard plugging to learn how to write that book . . . and then years of steady labor. Some job Now it's yours—for a few minutes and a few cents.

You're always being sorry for yourself because you can't go places, do things. Well, here's your chance to go places, do things. Here's your chance to "expose yourself to beauty"—and be the richer forever after. I don't often ask you to do something. I'm not going to ask you to do something now. But I'm telling you straight—

YOU'RE THE WORLD'S WORST NITWIT IF YOU DON'T READ THAT BOOK!

P. S.—Messrs Simon & Schuster: I know about 10,000,000 youngsters who need that book . . . want it . . . would eat it up. But they haven't any three dollars and ninety-five cents. Couldn't you do something about it? Maybe a paper cover—huh? Gwan—be a pal!

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

CONTENTMENT: Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself. But godliness with contentment is great gain For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.—1 Timothy 6:5-7.

What One Man Thinks

—By DAVID GIBSON

There should be land holders rather than land owners.

Good roads add three to seven times their cost to abutting land values.

Better, a crooked politician than a professor of political economy in an endowed college.

When land is taxed, no man is taxed; nor will it in any way interfere with human industry.

Political science is man's relation to man; political economy is man's relation to natural resources.

"Government should be supported by the people rather than government supporting the people."—Grover Cleveland.

Frank Brown.

IT is more a matter of who we convert rather than how many we convert.

It is well known that Tom L. Johnson was converted to the Single Tax economic philosophy by a train boy putting a copy of "Social Problems," by Henry George, in his lap on his way from Indianapolis to Cleveland about 1888.

He read it through almost at one sitting, bought a copy of "Progress and Poverty" on arrival in Cleveland, read it and afterwards submitted it to his attorney, L. A. Russell, Cleveland, paid him a fee and asked the answer to it.

Russell reported that there was no answer!

Later, Tom Johnson called upon Henry George in New York, and the two became intimate.

Still later, he gradually retired from business which included steel mills at Lorain, O., and Johnstown, Pa., street railroad holdings, Indianapolis, Cleveland and Brooklyn, to enter politics and promote the economic philosophy of Henry George.

He served two terms in Congress and at one session he got the floor of the house, read "Social Problems" into the record, and nearly a million copies of it were circulated free under a government frank.

For years he financed The Public, Chicago, a weekly publication devoted to the Georgian philosophy and edited by the late Louis F. Post.

He served seven terms as mayor of Cleveland, and in his political meetings, held in a tent, and which became nationally famous, he never failed to devote a part of his address to the Single Tax cause.

Even in England, along with Lloyd George, John Paul and Joseph Fels, with money and effort, he supported the successful defeat of the veto power of the House of Lords and to clear the way for a revision of the land and tax laws of England.

Tom Johnson devoted his life and fortune to the cause of social economic justice and today his grave is next that of Henry George in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y.

I have long known Frank Brown, a prosperous coffee merchant of Indianapolis—my home town. He is about my age and something more than a mere acquaintance exists between us; for we have the same social economic belief.

The other day I met Frank Brown in a Detroit hotel. In the course of our conversation I mentioned that Tom Johnson had been converted to the Single Tax cause by a train boy handing him a copy of Henry George's "Social Problems" on his way from Indianapolis to Cleveland.

"Yes," said Frank Brown, "I was that train boy!"

He went on to say: "I had read the book some weeks before and had become convinced that it contained the eventual solution to social economic justice and had purchased a few copies at wholesale as an addition to my train boy stock.

"When I first laid the book in Mr. Johnson's lap he seemed to have the impression that it pertained to a sex social problem and handed it back to me saying that he was not interested.

"But I got the train conductor, who knew Mr. Johnson and had also read the book, to urge it upon him, which he did by guaranteeing the price, 50 cents, if he did not find it interesting."

Richard Mansfield.

YOUNG PEOPLE have a way of "dating" or classifying the mental period of their elders by the actors and plays that they talk about.

Recently I mentioned the name of Richard Mansfield to a young woman prominent in little theater organizations.

She had never heard of him.

The other day a Cleveland school teacher mentioned the name of Mary Pickford to a class of 12-year old girls.

None of them had ever heard of her.

Richard Mansfield, in my memory of him, was about the best of the histrionic profession in his day—not only in action, but voice and as a stage producer. He died in 1907 in his 50th year.

About 1886 two actors made their debuts as stars in two neighboring theaters of Boston on the same night and in two new plays.

One was Denman Thompson in "Old Homestead," and the other was Richard Mansfield in an English version of a German play, "Prince Otto," in which he sang a group of romantic German songs to his own piano accompaniment.

Both plays were instantaneous popular successes. Denman Thompson played "Old Homestead" up to a few days of his death 25 years later—never appeared in anything else, only employing a small company made up of relatives.

Mansfield produced 56 plays during his career, many of them most elaborate, including the three Richards of Shakespeare and an English version of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac." He employed thousands of actors and spent millions in scenery and costumes, while he could have continued in "Prince Otto" to a huge fortune and a simple life.

Personally, Mansfield was decidedly temperamental, a good bit of a martinet—reminded me of what I have read of Richard Wagner and what I actually observed in Louis Sullivan, the world-renowned architect.

I once called upon Richard Mansfield in company with the late William Sage, dramatic critic of The Cleveland Leader—one of the best and most interesting writers on any subject of his selection.

He had a suite in the Colonial Hotel, Cleveland, including a private dining room. He told his personal waiter to bring us cigars which the waiter proceeded to do from a sideboard drawer. On his way to serve us he shook the box to see if it was empty. At once Mansfield flew into a rage and kicked the waiter out the door.

Sometime later, he filled a week's engagement in Cincinnati, playing Cyrano to houses that had been sold out weeks in advance. His private car, in which he traveled, had been sidetracked at Millbank, a pleasant suburb of the Queen City. Mansfield got to playing ball with a group of young boys in the neighborhood, feeding them to fill in the dining room of his car.

One afternoon he gave these boys a collective pass to a box for the performance that night. The boys appeared at the theater, but they were told that there was no box. Boys get in where devils fear to tread and they appeared at Mansfield's dressing room to inform him that his pass had not been honored.

Mansfield took the pass and added: No box, no performance!"

The boys were edged in by extra seats placed in the boxes—12 of them—and the box holders informed by the management that otherwise the audience would be dismissed with their money refunded.

DRIVE CAREFULLY SAVE LIVES

If candidates were as good performers as they are promisers everything would be fine.

As we become civilized, radio will give less time to commercial ballyhoo and bum jokes and cheap songs, and take up the job of general enlightenment.

Dalhover, of the Brady gang, is to be tried by the federal government, thus avoiding possibility that he might be regarded as "a home town boy who made good."

Four Ballots for Mansfield Voters.

MANSFIELD voters will have four ballots to mark when they go to the polls next Tuesday.

The largest is for election of city officials, the Democratic and Republican tickets being side by side, with a circle at the top of each—for the x-mark indicating a "straight" vote.

Space is provided in front of the name of each candidate for mayor, president of council, treasurer, solicitor, councilmen-at-large and ward councilman, so that the voter's "x" will indicate preference in each instance.

Another ballot is for selection of township officers; the third is for non-partisan choice of three members of the Mansfield board of education, and the fourth is for continuance of the present one-tenth of a mill tax levy to provide for the maintenance of Mansfield's playgrounds and recreational program.

Should Be Annual Affair.

LAST NIGHT'S Halloween celebration, with its big parade, and concentration of activities in the downtown section, was remindful of the Halloween parties held in Mansfield regularly for a number of years—originated and repeatedly sponsored by the late Fred Hunt.

More recently a number of other cities have adopted the plan of providing Halloween entertainment and amusement for the children, thus furnishing an outlet for youthful exuberance without subjecting the entire city to the property damage and annoyance which otherwise attaches to observance of this occasion.

Last night's party, from the standpoint of large participation and the lively interest of thousands of spectators, indicates the advisability of organized co-operation in carrying through such an event each Halloween, with such elaboration as additional funds would make possible.

Mansfield Attracts Tourists.

WITHOUT making any definite effort along that line, Mansfield comes in for a nice share in the money that is spent each year by tourists as they travel around the country.

Mansfield, as you may have noted, is so located as to make an excellent over-night stopping place for motorists making long-distance trips and who recognize this as a city in which they can find entertainment, comfortable lodging, good food and well-stocked stores.

A survey indicates that this year's tourist business in Mansfield will run between $300,000 and $400,000—with every likelihood that this could be steadily increased if more attention were paid to it.

Not only do tourists patronize hotels, restaurants and filling stations, but also, in many instances, they attend theaters and also visit stores for items of merchandise for which a need arises or which attracts their notice.

The main highways passing through Mansfield are important factors in bringing many thousands of motorists through this city—and the more that can be influenced to stop and shop, the better it will be for everybody concerned.

Will Refuse Gasoline to Drunks.

HAVING attained the unenviable distinction of heading the list with largest traffic toll of any city in its class, Columbus plans drastic action to remedy an intolerable situation.

As a quick move in that direction Franklin county gasoline dealers voted unanimously this week to refuse to sell gasoline to any driver who shows indications of being under the influence of intoxicants.

While such action falls far short of solving the problem of drunken driving—which is held responsible for a large percentage of traffic accidents—it is at least a step in the direction of removing dangerous drivers from streets and highways—until the point is eventually reached where drunken driving is treated as a major offense rather than as a boyish prank.

Little effort has been made in Mansfield to PREVENT drunken driving. The time may come when it will be regarded as advisable to station a police officer at each night club, from midnight until the 2:30 closing time, to prevent intoxicated persons from getting behind the wheel of a car.

The Franklin county idea of filling station operators and attendants refusing to sell gasoline to intoxicated persons is also worthy of consideration here.

Another Editorial From Kansas.

TODAY'S column by O. O. McIntyre, which appears alongside, is given largely to reprinting an editorial which appeared originally in Wichita, Kan., Beacon, and which Mr. McIntyre believes will rival in popularity that other famous Kansas editorial, the William Allen White masterpiece, "What's the Matter With Kansas?"

The editorial to which McIntyre gives his column today was written by R. E. Josh Wilson a few months before his death, apparently as a sudden inspiration one afternoon when he was seated at his desk.

Whether or not you have been a regular reader of McIntyre, this is a column which you would not care to miss—and one which you may wish to clip for your scrapbook.

A nature note says that sap runs up some trees at the rate of eight inches a minute—and into them at sixty miles an hour.

Time marches on! It is now the girl in the ad who is willing to take a long walk to get her favorite cigaret.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

ANOTHER editorial out of Kansas threatens to rival in popularity the famous William Allen White masterpiece: "What's the matter with Kansas?" Shortly before his passing a few months ago, R. E. Josh Wilson, editorial writer on the Wichita Beacon, penned the now famous: "When I Die."

It runs: When I die I shall accomplish in the millionth of the twinkling of an eye that which science through the ages has been unable to achieve. I shall have learned the secrets of the universe. Unfettered, I shall have proceeded the farthest star of the universal nebulae. . . .

Knowledge of the infinite will be mine when I die. While loved ones gather round, perhaps to mourn, I shall know that in the heavens are many mansions. I have seen them on dark nights as I have contemplated the skies. And beyond those are countless more.

On Asterion may my spirit rest or I may pass through gates of pearl into a home of golden thoroughfares on a star the light of which has not yet reached the world wherein I have had my being. Or I may choose a planet for eternal residence, that its rays may be observed by those I loved below.

When I die, tho no shackles bind me, there will continue the ties of love which endure when the heart no longer throbs, warm blood no more to course through arteries that withered as twilight neared, the soul to soar in timeless flight. Thus I shall not be detached from things of precious memory, ages passing as swiftly as an instant is told by the hour glass within the garden's lovely walls. I may view from the firmament of space the tread, the dissolution and the resurrection of those whom I left behind. I shall be ecstatic, for their good deeds will have sweetened my everlasting peace, their remissness of trivial moment before the great jurist who determines destinies.

When I die I shall mingle with kings who loved their fellowmen on earth, with commoners whose exalted works placed them near the throne on high. Trillions who have gone to dust to rise again will pass before me and I will know them all; for souls may remain as individuals yet they are as one, even as the sea is the assembling of drops of water drawn together through nature's powers.

Should my grievous worldly faults consign me to existence as an earth-bound soul until penance has been done, I shall be satisfied as I proceed through lower astral planes. I shall have no ills of body and my mind will prove serene in the knowledge that as I achieve atonement I shall be admitted to eternal joys. I will suffer no hunger or thirst nor will I endure distress for lack of shelter as I pass over extensive distances on the wings of night, unhindered by the elements.

I may look in upon a quiet fireside where sit those who were my friends; I may seek them out tho they are beyond vast oceans in widely scattered lands. I may contemplate them in their endeavors, tho one is in London, another in antipodes. Physical space will mean nothing as I continue earth bound in expiation. I shill enjoy earthly contacts, yet be among the immortals.

Should it be that there is naught beyond the grave, still shall have been given me the greatest of boons that humankind desires.

What sweeter blessing do we ask than dreamless sleep? That shall be mine, should it be that when the soul takes flight from its encasement of flesh and bone it is no more. I shall then be beyond the sufferings of vitality, no uncertainties awaiting me in a celestial void. Priceless sleep! Why fear to die?

Note: Mr. Wilson was one of the quiet contemplators of existence so often found writing anonymously for the editorial pages. Although not conscious of the great change so many thinkers now call translation, he was in the shadow of Death, when one day at his desk he was suddenly inspired to write this epic so different from his usual vein. It was only a short while later that he rather prophetically and quite fearlessly faced the experience the late Charles Frohman on a sinking ship called "life's greatest adventure."

MIDDLE OF THE ROAD SEEMS SAFER

Will Let Democrats Fight Among Themselves

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Republicans will be little heard from at the extra session of congress beginning Nov. 15. Nor will they be much heard from at the regular session, beginning Jan. 3.

There are not enough of them on Capitol Hill to be more than faintly audible, even if they desired to create plenty of noise. But they do not desire to do so, anyway. Legislative outsiders, like Herbert Hoover, Alf M. Landon and John D. M. Hamilton seem disposed to stir up a racket but the policy of those who come to Washington is to put the soft pedal on, in order to leave the Democrats as free as possible to quarrel between themselves.

There is every prospect that the Democrats will oblige the G. O. P. strategists. They are piling into the capital now and evidently they are full of fight.

* * *

FIGHT WITHIN PARTY.

Obviously it will be an intra-Democratic scrap.

It will be over current issues, of course, but it will be conducted with a view to future considerations.

In part it will be contemplative of next year's congressional nominating primaries New Deal law-makers naturally assume that they will have administrative support in their effort to be re-selected as candidates to succeed themselves at 1938's November elections.

Anti-New Deal Democrats, however, feel no such certainty. Postmaster General Farley has said that there will be "no reprisals" against them, but they have their doubts. And about one-fourth to one-third of congress' Democrats are more or less anti-New Deal.

So here is the making of a vicious internal party conflict between Nov. 15 and next spring.

* * *

WHEELER BACK WITH F.D.R.?

Not all Democratic anti-New Dealers are 100 per centers.

For example, Senator Burton K. Wheeler made himself known as a violent "anti" by reason of his opposition, President Roosevelt's supreme court enlargement plan, but, in the main, he was a New Dealer. If the administration drops the court plan presumably he will be, in other respects, a New Dealer again.

But there are other Democratic statesmen who are anti-New Deal on broad principles.

* * *

NOT NEW DEALERS.

These, largely, are the southerners.

They object, not only to supreme court enlargement, but to numerous other New Deal legislative proposals — notably the wage-and-hour bill and to anti-lynching legislation on a federal scale.

In short, these folk are not New Dealers at all.

Yet they are Democrats, as politically defined.

They do not particularly care about next spring's primaries or the subsequent election day; they expect to win both times, Dixie, being so dependable

They look ahead to 1940.

* * *

SOUTHERNERS' AIM.

The south's aim, then, is to go into the 1940 Democratic national convention with the complaint that the Rooseveltian so-called Democratic administration has not been genuinely Democratic.

Their notion, this autumn and next winter and spring, is to win back the Democratic organization to what they consider Democracy.

They will strive for it like tigers.

Thus the coming extra session of congress is not alone to be reckoned with. The equation involves also the 1939 and 1940 regular sessions, and whatever additional extra sessions there may be in the meantime.

The rumpus is just in its incipiency.

Listen, World!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON—

Expose Yourself to Beauty.

THIS isn't a financial column, but there's no harm in passing on a swell tip to a friend. So—

Want to get in on a good thing? Then listen—

I've just made one of the best bargains of my life. It cost me $3.95—and 20 minutes a day for two weeks. But, by conservative estimate, I'm at least $25,000 wealthier in actual cash—and immeasurably enriched in all other departments of my life. How come?

I've "exposed myself to beauty."

Odd phrase, isn't it? I borrowed it from my "investment"—said investment being 677 pages of the finest talk that ever slid from pen or typewriter. Hendrik Willem Van Loon did it . . . called it "The Arts" . . . and Simon & Schuster published it. All of which sounds like another one of those highbrow headaches issued in the name of literature. But 'tisn't.

Here is the story of beauty. The story of how beauty began as a vague restlessness, reaching in the heart of men . . . and spread . . . and grew . . . and bloomed into painting and sculpture, architecture and music.

Here is a story of beauty. But you do not know you are learning something when you read it. You do not even know you are reading. You have gone a long way off from books. You are a naked barbarian, 20,000 years ago, crouching in your cave—scratching the race's first dim pictures on its sooty walls—with the stench of gnawed bones in your flattened nose and a strange dream forming in your awakening brain.

Or you are a troubadour in ragged gilt and velvet, singing your way through feudal castles and bawdy inns—

Or a cloistered monk in a stone wall, illuminating priceless vellum with shivering hands—

Here is the story of beauty. But it not a big-word book filled with an outsize language and yawns. It is the story of men . . . and the reaching dream in the hearts of men. The story of laughter and love, murder and rape . . . moonlight on a Roman temple . . . and a song trembling through the reeds at dawn.

As thrilling—and exciting to read—and almost as bloody in parts—as the latest detective yarn.

As riotous as a football game—or a wolf hunt.

As hauntingly lovely as Juliet's first kiss.

All that in one book. Plain words—easy words—as if you were talking to yourself. Pictures everywhere—easy pictures—as if you drew them yourself. And always the story of beauty unrolling as if it had come out of yourself. As, of course, it did. For this is the story of MAN, as well as the story of beauty . . . of men, and all the things he has been and done . . . you, yourself, among them.

The sort of a book you'd write if you were going to write a book. Actually it took a very smart man thirty years of hard plugging to learn how to write that book . . . and then years of steady labor. Some job. Now it's yours—for a few minutes and a few cents.

You're always being sorry for yourself because you can't go places, do things. Well, here's your chance to go places, do things. Here's your chance to "expose yourself to beauty"—and be the richer forever after. I don't often ask you to do something. I'm not going to ask you to do something now. But I'm telling you straight—

YOU'RE THE WORLD'S WORST NITWIT IF YOU DON'T READ THAT BOOK!

P. S.—Messrs. Simon & Schuster: I know about 10,000,000 youngsters who need that book . . . want it . . . would eat it up. But they haven't any three dollars and ninety-five cents. Couldn't you do something about it? Maybe a paper cover—huh? Gwan—be a pal!

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

CONTENTMENT: Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself. But godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.—1 Timothy 6:5-7.

Timely Editorial

Short Cut to Fame.

From Hollywood comes the jubilant assurance that John Montague, alias Laverne Moore, golfer extraordinary, prince of good fellows and pal of movie stars, recently acquitted of a seven-year-old robbery charge, will make a million dollars in seven years.

The word is that the public is panting in eagerness to see him play golf, to hear his voice over the radio, to read the words of wisdom his versatile mind turns out.

In fact about the only thing that hasn't been promised him is a seat on the U. S. supreme court bench, but maybe they're saving that as a surprise.

Mr. Montague has had a great deal of national publicity during the past year. Possibly he is a charming fellow, a highly talented young man, and all that, but there's something about the whole business that is highly nauseating. Somehow we do not feel that the movies, radio nor anything else will be particularly increased in public estimate by their policy of grabbing onto every character that manages to acquire widespread notoriety. — Ohio State Journal.

What One Man Thinks

—By DAVID GIBSON

There should be land holders rather than land owners.

Good roads add three to seven times their cost to abutting land values.

Better, a crooked politician than a professor of political economy in an endowed college.

When land is taxed, no man is taxed; nor will it in any way interfere with human industry.

Political science is man's relation to man; political economy is man's relation to natural resources.

"Government should be supported by the people rather than government supporting the people."—Grover Cleveland.

Frank Brown.

IT is more a matter of who we convert rather than how many we convert.

It is well known that Tom L. Johnson was converted to the Single Tax economic philosophy by a train boy putting a copy of "Social Problems," by Henry George, in his lap on his way from Indianapolis to Cleveland about 1888.

He read it through almost at one sitting, bought a copy of "Progress and Poverty" on arrival in Cleveland, read it and afterwards submitted it to his attorney, L. A. Russell, Cleveland, paid him a fee and asked the answer to it.

Russell reported that there was no answer!

Later, Tom Johnson called upon Henry George in New York, and the two became intimate.

Still later, he gradually retired from business which included steel mills at Lorain, O., and Johnstown, Pa., street railroad holdings, Indianapolis, Cleveland and Brooklyn, to enter politics and promote the economic philosophy of Henry George.

He served two terms in Congress and at one session he got the floor of the house, read "Social Problems" into the record, and nearly a million copies of it were circulated free under a government frank.

For years he financed The Public, Chicago, a weekly publication devoted to the Georgian philosophy and edited by the late Louis F. Post.

He served seven terms as mayor of Cleveland, and in his political meetings, held in a tent, and which became nationally famous, he never failed to devote a part of his address to the Single Tax cause.

Even in England, along with Lloyd George, John Paul and Joseph Fels, with money and effort, he supported the successful defeat of the veto power of the House of Lords and to clear the way for a revision of the land and tax laws of England.

Tom Johnson devoted his life and fortune to the cause of social economic justice and today his grave is next that of Henry George in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y.

I have long known Frank Brown, a prosperous coffee merchant of Indianapolis—my home town. He is about my age and something more than a mere acquaintance exists between us; for we have the same social economic belief.

The other day I met Frank Brown in a Detroit hotel. In the course of our conversation I mentioned that Tom Johnson had been converted to the Single Tax cause by a train boy handing him a copy of Henry George's "Social Problems" on his way from Indianapolis to Cleveland.

"Yes," said Frank Brown, "I was that train boy!"

He went on to say: "I had read the book some weeks before and had become convinced that it contained the eventual solution to social economic justice and had purchased a few copies at wholesale as an addition to my train boy stock.

"When I first laid the book in Mr. Johnson's lap he seemed to have the impression that it pertained to a sex social problem and handed it back to me saying that he was not interested.

"But I got the train conductor, who knew Mr. Johnson and had also read the book, to urge it upon him, which he did by guaranteeing the price, 50 cents, if he did not find it interesting."

Richard Mansfield.

YOUNG PEOPLE have a way of "dating" or classifying the mental period of their elders by the actors and plays that they talk about.

Recently I mentioned the name of Richard Mansfield to a young woman prominent in little theater organizations.

She had never heard of him.

The other day a Cleveland school teacher mentioned the name of Mary Pickford to a class of 12-year old girls.

None of them had ever heard of her.

Richard Mansfield, in my memory of him, was about the best of the histrionic profession in his day—not only in action, but voice and as a stage producer. He died in 1907 in his 50th year.

About 1886 two actors made their debuts as stars in two neighboring theaters of Boston on the same night and in two new plays.

One was Denman Thompson in "Old Homestead," and the other was Richard Mansfield in an English version of a German play, "Prince Otto," in which he sang a group of romantic German songs to his own piano accompaniment.

Both plays were instantaneous popular successes. Denman Thompson played "Old Homestead" up to a few days of his death 25 years later—never appeared in anything else, only employing a small company made up of relatives.

Mansfield produced 56 plays during his career, many of them most elaborate, including the three Richards of Shakespeare and an English version of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac." He employed thousands of actors and spent millions in scenery and costumes, while he could have continued in "Prince Otto" to a huge fortune and a simple life.

Personally, Mansfield was decidedly temperamental, a good bit of a martinet—reminded me of what I have read of Richard Wagner and what I actually observed in Louis Sullivan, the world-renowned architect.

I once called upon Richard Mansfield in company with the late William Sage, dramatic critic of The Cleveland Leader—one of the best and most interesting writers on any subject of his selection.

He had a suite in the Colonial Hotel, Cleveland, including a private dining room. He told his personal waiter to bring us cigars which the waiter proceeded to do from a sideboard drawer. On his way to serve us he shook the box to see if it was empty. At once Mansfield flew into a rage and kicked the waiter out the door.

Sometime later, he filled a week's engagement in Cincinnati, playing Cyrano to houses that had been sold out weeks in advance. His private car, in which he traveled, had been sidetracked at Millbank, a pleasant suburb of the Queen City. Mansfield got to playing ball with a group of young boys in the neighborhood, feeding them to fill in the dining room of his car.

One afternoon he gave these boys a collective pass to a box for the performance that night. The boys appeared at the theater, but they were told that there was no box. Boys get in where devils fear to tread and they appeared at Mansfield's dressing room to inform him that his pass had not been honored.

Mansfield took the pass and added: No box, no performance!"

The boys were edged in by extra seats placed in the boxes—12 of them—and the box holders informed by the management that otherwise the audience would be dismissed with their money refunded.

BLIND ATTORNEY, 'BOY MAYOR,' EX-CONTRACTOR SEEK ELECTION

(By Staff Correspondent)

BELLVILLE — This community's campaign for public offices has been without fanfare and oratory as in more populated areas, but a unique three-way mayoralty contest, between a blind attorney, a former building contractor and the incumbent "boy mayor" has the town talking politics.

Edgar R. Stahl who has served four years as mayor and is seeking another two-year term at the age of 28 has two strong rivals in Vance C. Stuller, blind for 14 years, and Thomas R. Zeigler, a newcomer in politics

The drive for votes has been confined largely to personal contacts about this town of 1,000 population. Platforms and objectives have been announced but as to controversial issues—if there are any—they have not been brought out in the open.

The "boy mayor's" campaign for re-election is based largely on his desire, along with incumbent councilmen also seeking re-election, to see the completion of an $80,000 sewage disposal system. The job is now half way finished.

Stahl gained prominence in Bellville and vicinity as a crack baseball pitcher in high school days. He once tried out for a post on a professional baseball team.

In Attorney Stuller, Stahl has a rival whose age is the same, and who has as his chief objectives cited "government economy," and proper regulation of traffic along state route 13, busy thoroughfare running through the town's main street.

An accident while in his youth cost him his sight 14 years ago. His wife assists him in his legal work by esrving as his reader. He is village solicitor and justice of peace of Jefferson township.

Zeigler is campaignig on "honesty in government" and has made pre-election "promises."

Zeigler was placed in candidacy through nomination by a Republican caucus. Stahl was nominated at a Democratic caucus and Stuller has entered the race as an Independent Democrat.

Elections in Bellville are nonpartisan.
